In 1928, a new movie palace opened in Detroit called the Redford Theatre and it quickly became a neighborhood institution. Decades later hundreds of movie palaces fell into disrepair but the Redford Theatre and its theatre organ managed to escape the ravages of neglect that befell so many others with support from the Motor City Theatre Organ Society (MCTOS), a team of dedicated volunteers and devoted patrons.

We invite you to play a vital role in the continued operation and improvements to this beautiful, one of a kind movie palace. The Redford is a special theatre that brings history to life, entertaining and educating audiences from all over metro Detroit. Become a sustaining donor today and play an active role in carrying on the Redford Theatre traditions!

"I tell people the Redford is my happy place - a true gem. There's just a special feeling that washes over me every time I go. And I'm already thinking of the next time I'll come back every time I leave. I just don't want the magic to end."

A DETROIT STORY

The Redford Theatre's story is reflective of Detroit's story. It's a story of beauty and of a rich history. A story of volunteers and the community coming together. It's a story of resilience and can-do spirit.

At one point, the city of Detroit was home to more than 100 single screen movie theatres. Today, only 3 are regularly operating. With hard work and deep commitment the Redford Theatre not just survives, it thrives! Those who come to out to see films or enjoy an organ concert know it's a special place where history and this shared story come to life.

Be a part of the next chapter in Detroit's rebirth. Help us shine this old girl up, so that future generations may see movies the way they were meant to be seen.
